What You Need to Know about Overdrafts and Overdraft Fees

An overdraft occurs when you do not have enough money in your account to cover a transaction, but we pay it anyway. We authorize and pay transactions using the Available Balance in your account. An overdraft can occur when one or more debit items (for example check, ACH, ATM, debit card, etc.) attempts to clear your account in an amount that exceeds the Available Balance of your deposit account. “Available Balance” is calculated by taking the prior business day’s Ledger Balance and subtracting funds being held to cover pending transactions. A pending transaction is a transaction the bank is aware of but has not yet cleared your account and might include must-pay debit card transactions or deposits made to your account for which funds have not yet been collected. “Ledger Balance” is typically the balance from the close of the previous business day and includes all transactions that cleared the account as of the previous business day. Neither Ledger Balance nor Available Balance reflects any transactions the bank does not know about such as checks written but not yet received by the bank.

We can cover your overdrafts in two different ways:

1. We have standard overdraft practices that come with your account.
2. We also offer overdraft protection plans, such as a line of credit or a link to another account, which may be less expensive than our standard overdraft practices. To learn more, ask us about these plans.

This notice explains our standard overdraft practices.

What are the standard overdraft practices that come with my account?

We do authorize and pay overdrafts for the following types of transactions:

- Checks and other transactions using your checking account number
- Automatic bill payments

We do not authorize and pay overdrafts for the following types of transactions unless you ask us to (see below):

- ATM transactions
- Everyday debit card transactions

We pay overdrafts at our discretion, which means we do not guarantee that we will always authorize and pay any type of transaction.

If we do not authorize and pay an overdraft, your transaction will be declined.

What fees will I be charged if Synovus Bank pays my overdraft?

Under our standard overdraft practices:

- We charge a fee of $36 each time we pay an overdraft ($29 for military accounts).
- If your account is overdrawn for 7 or more consecutive calendar days, we will charge an additional $35 overdraft collection fee ($25 for military accounts).
- We will not charge you a fee if your account is overdrawn by $5 or less on any given day.
- There is a limit of $216 per day on the total fees we can charge you for overdrawing your account ($174 for military accounts).
- You will not be charged these fees if they are waived because of the type of account you have opened.

What if I want Synovus Bank to authorize and pay overdrafts on my ATM and everyday debit card transactions?

With Overdraft Privilege Extended Coverage, you authorize us to also pay overdrafts on ATM and everyday debit card transactions. If you have not already enrolled, you can do so or you can revoke your authorization for the bank to pay these overdrafts at any time by any of the below methods. Your revocation must include both your name and your account number so that we can properly identify your account.
